

BRADY'S VERY HUNGRY DAY

A story for Calvin and Emily

by Carol Watson, Copyright 2005

One day, after a long nap and a big yawn, Brady said to himself, "Hmmm. I'm very hungry. I wonder what there is around here to eat?"

Brady saw Kito eating his dinner. "I wonder what Kito has. I think I'll fly over there and check it out."

And that's just what he did. He chased Kito away from his dish, grabbed a piece of kibble, and flew up onto the kitchen counter where he happily munched away.

"Hey!", said Kito. "That's not fair! That's MY dinner!"

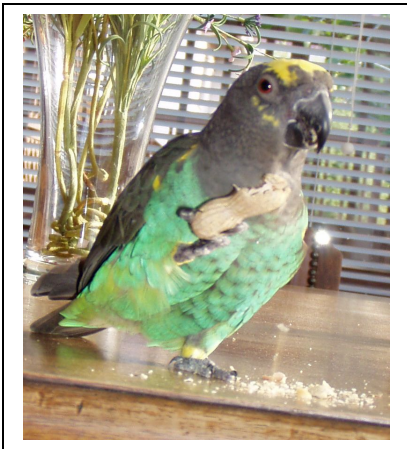

But Brady didn't care. "Kibble is very good," he said, "but I'm still hungry. "

So he flew into the living room. Can you guess what he found? That's right – popcorn! Brady ate and ate but he was still hungry! "I wonder what else there is around here to eat?" he said. So he flew onto the coffee table where he spied something in a bowl. "This doesn't look like bird food but it looks pretty good."

It was candy!
And he ate a piece.

But Brady was still hungry. He flew into the kitchen and looked around. And do you know what he found? A peanut! He didn't waste any time gobbling it up.

After that, as you can imagine, Brady was very thirsty and he knew just where to go. He flew to the kitchen sink and had a long drink of water.

It had been a long day and Brady was very tired. "I think I'll take a nap," he said.

And that's just what he did.

The end.